

Kaymer still up for the Cup

GOLF
By ROBERT GORMAN

FORMER world No.1 Martin Kaymer has not given up hope of playing in the Ryder Cup.

The 36-year-old has not tasted victory since the US Open in 2014 but he improved his form with six top-10 finishes last season.

He has now turned his attention from the PGA Tour to the European Tour and will battle freezing conditions in this week's Austrian Golf Open.

Kaymer is currently 47th in the Ryder Cup standings, but he said: 'It's always there, that belief, and I think I need a couple of wins. If my form is really good three or four weeks before the Ryder Cup maybe it's enough, or maybe (Pádraig) Harrington might want me... Who knows?'

TYRONE football legend Seán Cavanagh has revealed that he was so critical of his own performances during his career that he was unable to enjoy his greatest game.

Cavanagh has admitted in a TG4 Laochra Gael documentary to be broadcast next week, that despite sealing his third All-Ireland win with a man-of-the-match performance against Kerry in the 2008 Sam Maguire Cup decider, he went to bed early over his disappointment at spurning a goal chance in the game.

'I was that annoyed with my own individual performances in '03 and '05 in the finals that I just saw it as another chance to almost redeem myself,' admits Cavanagh.

'It just worked, it just clicked, every ball I kicked seemed to fly over the bar at a ridiculous pace.

'It just was one of those days I could do no wrong, the less I seemed to put effort into things the more things seemed to happen.

'But as brilliant a day that was I found a chink in it all, whereby I felt I had let myself down by not going for goal when I had the chance to score that goal in the All-Ireland final, to be like Peter Canavan in '05, to be like Paudge Quinn in 1986, Seamus Darby for Offaly.

'I went to bed early that night in CityWest, lying listening to the cars on the N7. I remember looking at my phone, it might have been half three in the morning and I had been in bed from maybe 11 or 12, but I just couldn't sleep because all I could think of was "why did you not go for goal?"

And Cavanagh, who retired in 2017, also admitted he was 'hurt' by a claim made by Mickey Harte in his autobiography that his failure to start in the 2009 semi-final against Cork was because he could not handle the pressure.

'It was hurtful, he said the ghost writer had written that and it wasn't him. He apologised for it. I suppose that was difficult for me to accept given the fact it was his book.'

I DID NOT ENJOY 2008 FINAL WIN - CAVANAGH

Red Hand regret: Seán Cavanagh felt he should have netted in the '08 final SPORTSFILE
