

Racing chiefs defiant on drug testing

By EOGHAN O'BRIEN

THE Irish Horseracing Regulatory Board launched a staunch defence of its record concerning drug testing in the first of a series of hearings at the Joint Committee on Agriculture, Food, and the Marine.

Members of the committee put questions to Brian Kavanagh, chief executive of Horse Racing Ireland, Denis Egan, chief executive of the IHRB, and Dr Lynn Hillyer, chief veterinary officer at the IHRB.

The meetings were a direct follow-up to a newspaper interview by leading trainer Jim Bolger that racing would have its own 'Lance Armstrong' moment regarding drug use in the sport.

It began with Kavanagh reading an opening statement in which he stressed the importance of the racing industry to Ireland's economy and 'as such, the reputation and integrity of the product is of paramount importance, so the issue of drug testing is an important one with significant funds invested annually in this area.'

He went on to say: 'HRI sees its role as ensuring that the IHRB has sufficient resources, both financial, human and capital to carry out its responsibilities to the level expected of a major racing nation — and we support the IHRB to constantly improve their capacity in this area.'

Kavanagh also reported that all winners in Ireland are tested, that there has been an increase in out-of-competition testing and tests are also carried out at sales, studs and point-to-point meetings.

Egan, who recently announced he was taking early retirement, said: 'The IHRB's Equine Anti-Doping programme has developed into a sophisticated and extensive risk-based and intelligence-led strategy, in which it is not just the numbers of samples which matter but from what horses they are taken, where and when.'

Egan also addressed accusations that the IHRB had not acted upon information they were given by a reported whistleblower.

'Any information received by us is assessed, categorised and acted on as appropriate,' he said.

'We have a top-class anti-doping team headed up by Dr Lynn Hillyer — and while we continue to see evidence that there is no systematic attempt to cheat through doping in Irish racing, we will continue, with the assistance of the industry and those outside, to effectively detect, disrupt and deter such behaviour. It will not be tolerated - we will continue to seek it out - and where discovered, we will take all actions within our power to combat it without fear or favour.'

Like Egan, Hillyer took issue with the claims of inaction.

She said: 'The process is very simple. The information can come in via a number of routes, but once it lands on a desk it is dealt with.'

Yesterday's meeting was scheduled to last two hours. But not all questions were asked, and it will reconvene on July 20 to address the remaining areas of interest.
