LEWIS HAMILTON has blasted Formula One's ruling body after describing its decision to reprimand Sebastian Vettel for wearing a T-shirt in support of the LGBTQ+ community as "bull****".

Four-time world champion Vettel wore a "same love" rainbow T-shirt during the Hungarian national anthem on Sunday.

Under FIA rules, drivers are permitted to carry a message that conveys with the sport's We Race As One initiative during the pre-race ceremony. But the clothing must be removed for the national anthem.

Vettel was summoned to see the stewards. He explained that he forgot to remove his T-shirt because of the onset of rain.

Valtteri Bottas, Carlos Sainz and Lance Stroll were also reprimanded after they failed to take off their We Race As One T-shirts.

Vettel, who was stripped of his second place at the Hungarian Grand Prix following a fuel infringement, said afterwards: "I'm happy if they disqualify me. They can do whatever they want to me. I don't care. I would do it again."

Proud

In a now-deleted message on Instagram, Hamilton posted in support of Vettel.

The British driver (36) said: "Super proud of this guy. There is no rule that says what colour shirt you can wear and supporting the LGBTQ+ community is not reprehensible."

"This is his. Well done, Seb. I'll join you next time with the same shirt."

Hamilton later updated his post, writing: "Love to see this Seb supporting the LGBTQ+ community. Love always wins."

Hamilton heads into the sport's summer break with an eight-point advantage over Max Verstappen following Sunday's chaotic race.

Hamilton, meanwhile, believes he may be suffering from 'long Covid' after experiencing dizziness, fatigue and blurred vision after the Hungarian Grand Prix.

The seven-time F1 world champion saw his Mercedes team doctor following the race after he came close to collapsing and had to be helped onto the podium.

contracted Covid-19 last December and revealed in the post-race press conference that he feared he was suffering the long-term effects of coronavirus.

"I have been fighting all year with my health after what happened at the end of last year, and it is still a battle," he revealed. "I haven't spoken to anyone particularly about it, but I think it is lingering.

"I remember the effects when I had it. The training has been different since then and the levels of fatigue you get are different. It's a real challenge.

"So (I'm) just continuing to try and train and prepare the best way I can.

"Who knows what it is today? Maybe it's hydration, but I've definitely not had that experience."

Worse

He revealed to the press that he had similar effects after the recent British Grand Prix, but felt worse this time.

And he added: "I had something similar in Silverstone, but this is way worse. I was having real dizziness and everything got a bit blurry on the podium."

Mercedes team principal Toto Wolff said Hamilton had been sent to the team doctor after the race as a precaution, after he appeared overwhelmed on the podium.

"I think you can just relate to it with the heat out there and a race like he had with tons of overtaking," Wolff said. "That is exhausting. He should be all right, but it is better to be safe than sorry."

Long Covid is described as symptoms persisting for more than four weeks after the first suspected coronavirus episode that are not explained by something else.
