

Treacy set to retire as Sport Ireland chief

JOHN TREACY will retire as chief executive from Sport Ireland on December 31 this year, it was confirmed last night.

The Waterford native has been in the post since the establishment of the body in 2015, having previously served in the same role for the Irish Sports Council since 1999.

Treacy (right), who turns 65 next year, was initially appointed as the CEO on an interim basis before signing a four-year contract for the role in October 2016, which was extended by the Department of Sport last year because of the uncertainty caused by the pandemic.

Sport Ireland chairman Kieran Mulvey led the tributes last night: 'John Treacy has been a model chief executive that has led Irish Sports through action and strategic vision.

'The sport sector in Ireland is in a very strong position thanks to the leadership John has demonstrated since taking on the role with the Irish Sports Council in 1999. His contribution to sport in Ireland both as an athlete and chief executive is immeasurable.'

With Treacy at the helm, Irish sport has seen the introduction of the Irish anti-doping programme, the implementation of the high performance system and the roll-out of local sports partnerships to promote physical activity in local communities as well as overseeing the establishment of the Irish Institute of Sport (now Sport Ireland Institute).

It had been Treacy's intention to retire from the role last year but the postponement of the Tokyo Olympics and the onset of the pandemic ensured that he remained in the role for an extra year.
