Age looks the Trump card

EYES ON THE PRIZE: Judd Trump and (ins.) O'Sullivan

JUDD TRUMP admits he feels like the Crucible odd man out in an ageing legends convention.

But the Juddernaut wants to party like it's 1999 - the last time the Betfred World Championship semi-finals featured Ronnie O'Sullivan, John Higgins and Mark Williams.

The Sheffield final four line-up looks the best for 23 years, when the illustrious and much younger 'Class of 92' trio were joined by Stephen Hendry in the single-table arena set-up.

Shabby

The 46-year-old Rocket, Scot Higgins, also 46, and Wales' Williams, at 47, have won 13 world titles and a total of 93 ranking tournaments between them in their 30 years on tour.

Trump may be just 32, but his own CV isn't too shabby either - winning his one world title to date three years ago, and with 23 ranking titles in all to his name.

World No.1 Trump said: "I've ended up stuck in the middle of a world seniors' championship! With those big names I think it is the best semi-final line-up we have had for god knows how many years."

"It is incredible the three of them are not just still going, but at the top of the game. I hope one day I can still be playing to their level at that age."

Scooter

"I think they could all play on for another 10 years, into their late 50s and even 60s. Ronnie is someone you could see driving round the table in a mobility scooter when he is 70 to play each shot - he is that good."

"You always get big turning points in people's careers in sport and Mark deciding to carry on five years ago after being talked out of retirement by his wife Jo was one of those

"There might have been a few more titles to share if she hadn't!"

Trump dominated a scrappy opening session of his semi-final yesterday to claim a 7-1 lead over three-time champ Williams.

Two breaks of 70 helped him to a 3-0 lead and Trump made three more half-centuries as he pulled away.

The clash is set to resume this morning.

Dean WILSON

ROB KEY has asked Ben Stokes to build an England Test team in his image to lift it off the floor and get back to winning ways.

Key was in no doubt that Stokes was the right man for the job after speaking to those closest to him before making the first major decision of his tenure as managing director of England men's cricket.

There are more big calls to come, but the direction and improvement of the Test side is the main issue Key wants to get to grips with and he is using Stokes as his template.

Chat

"Ben epitomises everything our red-ball team needs," said Key.

"When we sat down to chat, we were sort of aligned in our thinking. To me, what it's about is changing the mentality of English red-ball cricket right throughout our system because that's the most important thing."

"I want players who can go out there, if you're a batsman, who can put bowlers under pressure but also soak up that pressure, but for long periods, and make good decisions."
