FOCUS: Emma Raducanu during practice ahead of the French Open

Emma is Rad-y for French Open

■ Neil McLEMAN

EMMA RADUCANU has revealed she is loving hitting the gym in her new training regime after declaring herself fit for her first French Open.

The US Open champion feared that she would miss the clay court Grand Slam after pulling out of the Rome Masters with a lower back injury.

She has had a string of physical ailments since her New York success, contracting Covid-19 in December and then suffering from blisters and hip and back problems.

But the No.12 seed, who will face Czech qualifier Linda Noskova, ranked world No.185, in the first round on Monday, said she is now pumping iron to build up her body for the ups and downs of pro tennis.

"I'm very happy to be able to play this tournament and fortunately I didn't have to miss this Grand Slam," said the British No.1. "There was doubt I would be here, it was definitely thrown into question."

Element

"I'm learning about my body and just figuring out what works physically, because that is an element of my game that needs to be looked at."

"I have been doing a lot more in the gym to try and fire up those muscles, keep the stability and do some rehab."

"I am working on my whole body but right now especially my core area, it's something I'm definitely learning to enjoy with each bit that I do."

"I get that positive reinforcement and I feel really good about myself."

"And it helps you mentally as well if you know that you definitely put the work in and I'm going to outlast or be fitter than my opponent on the other side of the court."

Naomi Osaka has revealed that she felt "very worried" returning to the French Open after pulling out of the event last year because she did not want to speak to the media.

The Japanese No.1 was fined €14,200 and threatened with expulsion from the tournament after her first-round win.

Worried

She then withdrew citing mental health struggles and revealed she had been suffering from depression since her 2018 US Open win.

At her pre-tournament press conference, Osaka said: "When I first came here, I was very worried that there were people that I offended in some way and I would just bump into them."

"But everyone has been really positive."

Cameron Norrie will face Slovakian world No.47 Alex Molcan in today's final of the Lyon Open after beating Holger Rune 6-2 5-7 6-4 in the semi-finals.

Norrie said: "It's never easy finishing a match. To have the break there in the second and then I kind of gifted a couple of easy ones."

"I was pretty mad inside but I managed to stay composed."

"It's nice to get over the line again, especially when the nerves are there."

"Hopefully I can go a step further and win the title. It's a perfect preparation for Roland Garros."

EVANS SLAMS SLAM

■ Neil McLEMAN

DAN EVANS has slammed the decision to strip Wimbledon of ranking points following the ban on Russian and Belarusian players.

The ATP and WTA have made the unprecedented decision to remove all the points from the grass-court Grand Slam tournament.

And the men's professional Tour claimed stars such as Daniil Medvedev and Andrey Rublev should have been allowed to compete after they had all signed a declaration stating that they did not support Russia's war in Ukraine.

"The ability for players of any nationality to enter tournaments based on merit, and without discrimination, is fundamental to our Tour," the ATP said in a statement.

Points

But British No 2 Evans (left) said: "We should all still be playing for ranking points at Wimbledon."

"If we're sticking it solely on tennis and not politics there should be points."

"There are a lot of other people losing out because of a small minority who are missing the tournament."
