

Team hotel searched by Danish police

DANISH police carried out a search at the hotel of cycling team Bahrain Victorious at the request of French authorities yesterday, Copenhagen Police said on the eve of the Tour de France Grand Depart.

Authorities searched all team vehicles and the rooms of staff and riders at 5:30am local time in Brøndby. The homes of riders and staff were also searched by police on Monday before their departure for the Tour.

French prosecutors opened a preliminary investigation into doping allegations against Bahrain Victorious after police searched the team's hotel late in last year's race.

'Based on a request from the French police, as part of an ongoing investigation in France, we have carried out a search at a hotel in Brøndby,' Chief Superintendent Dannie Rise said. 'We have no further information about the operation.'

The team said in a statement that it fully co-operated with the authorities and the search was completed within two hours.

'No items were seized from the team,' it added.

They did not offer any further details about the later incident, saying that their focus was solely on this year's Tour, which begins today in Copenhagen.

Tour organisers declined to comment.

Bahrain Victorious won three stages in last year's Tour. Their accommodation in Pau was raided after the 17th stage.

At the time, the prosecutor's office in Marseille said the investigation was into 'acquisition, transport, possession, import of a prohibited substance or prohibited method for use by an athlete without medical justification'.

Fifty police officers searched the team hotel, seizing medicines, laptops and phones. Last October, the team shrugged off suggestions that hair testing on three of the riders discovered traces of the powerful muscle relaxant Tizanidine. The substance is not prohibited by the World Anti-Doping Agency but the test results could indicate off-label use of the medicine.

Meanwhile, Tadej Pogacar has set his sights on a third consecutive Tour de France win, with the UAE Team Emirates rider saying that he was more confident than in 2021 when he became the youngest rider to win back-to-back titles.

Pogacar, 23, won the UAE Tour and the Strade Bianche this year and the Slovenian said he has been training at high altitudes to prepare for another crack at keeping the overall leader's yellow jersey.

'I'm excited to start the Tour. Like any other race, I want to do my best here. It's the biggest event on the calendar, so I'm happy to be there and to fight for the title,' he said.

'The preparation went well, I was at altitude in the Tour of Slovenia, then at altitude again. I think the shape is good. Compared to last year, there really aren't any differences, I'm maybe a bit more confident.'

The Tour begins today with an individual time trial in Copenhagen.

Pogacar could be the first rider since England's Chris Froome to win three consecutive titles.

Froome is set to make his 10th appearance at the Tour de France after being named in the Israel Premier Tech squad but the 37-year-old has not had great results since a crash in 2019.

It's not (about) winning the Tour de France right now, but I still dream about it, so I'm going to keep chasing that dream.'
