THE REAL ROCKY'S THE BEST

Gerry CALLAN ON THE ROPES

THE only world heavyweight champion to hang up his gloves without ever tasting professional defeat died in a plane crash 53 years ago next Wednesday.

Born Rocco Francis Marchegiano in Brockton, the son of Italian immigrants Pierino Marchegiano and Pasqualina Picciu and, after working as a delivery man, a ditchdigger, a shoemaker and a soldier (being stationed in Swansea for a time), Rocky Marciano (below) turned to boxing at the urging of his friend Allie Colombo.

On St Patrick's Night in 1947, using the name Rocky Mack, he knocked out Lee Epperson in three rounds at the Valley Arena in Holyoke, 90 miles west of Boston. The big breakthrough came in 1951 when Rex Layne, a 9/5 favourite, was stopped in six rounds, in Madison Square Garden.

Three months later a 37-year-old Joe Louis was knocked through the ropes and into retirement and the following July, in front of 31,118 at Yankee Stadium, Harry Matthews, who had just three losses in 89 fights, was blown away in the second round.

That win, his 42nd, set up a world title attempt against Jersey Joe Walcott, in the Municipal Stadium, Philadelphia on September 1952.

Dropped
 Going into the 13th round, the veteran champion, who had dropped Marciano for the first count of his career in the opening session, was ahead on all three scorecards.

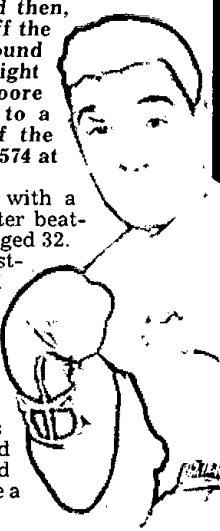

Then, as Walcott backed onto the ropes and prepared to throw a right, Marciano beat him to the punch; Walcott slumped to the canvas and was counted out by referee Charley Daggert. Rocky Marciano was the heavyweight champion of the world.

Eight months later, in May 1953, Walcott was knocked out at 2.25 of the first round at the Chicago Stadium.

Marciano's final year of action was 1955, when he halted Don Cockell in the ninth round at the Kezar Stadium in San Francisco in May and then, in September, came off the floor in the second round to drop light-heavyweight champion Archie Moore four times en route to a knock out at 1:19 of the ninth round before 61,574 at Yankee Stadium.

Seven months later, with a perfect 49-0 record after beating Moore, he retired, aged 32.

Notoriously untrusting of banks, he hid his money in various locations and, following his death in a plane crash in Newton in Iowa in August 1969, neither his widow Barbara nor his children Mary Anne and Rocco Kevin ever found what was believed to be a $4m treasure chest.

SACRED Heart Boxing Club lead the charge for Ireland last week at the European Schools Championships in Turkey. Brandon Geoghegan took gold at 50kg and clubmate Abbey Molloy (left) claimed bronze in the 42kg category.
